About

Olivia is a litigator who brings a personal touch to advocate for her clients' business needs. She believes that understanding clients' goals and company culture is essential to advocate for the interests of businesses, from small start-ups to large corporations.

Olivia has a broad practice, litigating in state and federal courts for both plaintiffs and defendants. She teams up with in-house counsel and C-suite executives in commercial disputes to draft discovery and briefing efforts to achieve the best outcome in the courtroom and at the negotiation table. Her experience includes partnering with clients in the hospitality industry to resolve disputes with vendors and associated businesses. Olivia also protects the brands of high-end retailers through trademark lawsuits across Texas and Oklahoma.

Prior to joining Hilgers, Olivia practiced as a litigation associate at Baker Botts L.L.P. in Dallas, where she litigated for Fortune 100 companies before the Eastern District of Texas and the Delaware Court of Chancery. Olivia served as a law clerk in the Northern District of Texas, first for the Honorable John R. Parker and then for the Honorable Sam A. Lindsay.

Olivia's relationship with the judiciary continues through her role as Vice President of the Federal Bar Association for the Northern District of Texas.

Olivia earned her Juris Doctor cum laude from the Texas A&M University School of Law. While attending law school, she served as Editor-in-Chief of the Texas A&M Law Review and interned in the Northern District of Texas and Texas Second Court of Appeals.

She is committed to serving the Dallas community through pro bono clients and non-profit board service.In her free time, Olivia enjoys playing folk music and stitching needlework.
